Rover Technology Fusions Contracts with American Medical Specialties

Rover Technology Fusions (RTF) has announced a two year Information Services contract with American Medical Specialties (AMS) to provide Web design and hosting, as well as, their Rover ARC product disaster recovery suite for secured off-site digital backup to protect AMS Information Technology Systems. AMS is no stranger when it comes to quality in their operations and products as they recently were recognized with the prestigious quality grades of CE MARK and ISO 13485. RTF is no stranger to data security and Web site development as they have been providing these solutions since 1997 and are one of the areas pioneers in mobile data with secured wireless communications.

"We are extremely proud that AMS has selected the RTF staff and products to not only protect their most valuable technology assets, but to communicate their message and build the AMS online product and sales portal", stated Bob Letzeisen, V/P Sales at RTF. "You know the old saying, you are judged by the company you keep and being able to add AMS to our already prestigious customer list is truly exciting." "It is a wonderful organization with great products, customer service and a wonderful team of professionals."

"When it comes to selecting a technology partner for office and off-site backup in our industry, it is imperative to find one with experience, a stellar performance record, and for us, one who truly understands the meaning of security, especially when it comes to regulatory requirements and our own internal policies for protecting customer and sales data." "We found such a partner with RTF." said Chuck Broes, Chairman and CEO of AMS.
